2. Issue/Topic/Activity
Creating a quality K-8 Dual Language Program (speaking from the experiences of an Asst. Principal and teachers from The Rafael Herndandez Dual Language School, PS/IS 218)

3. Highlights of Discussion/Recommendations/Next Action Steps
   • 7 years ago, a small group of parents researched dual language programs. They realized PS/IS 218 wasn’t delivering on their mission to provide a quality DL program to their children, so they went to the region to bring in a new administration that would implement a quality DL program.
   • Now the school is K-8 Dual Language
     o 2-way dual immersion
     o 50-50 model
     o 1/3 native ENG speakers, 1/3 native SPN speakers, 1/3 bilingual speakers
   • A series of orientation sessions for incoming parents of Kindergarten students
     o Speaks to the clear message our administration sends to parents about the mission, goals and expectations of our program
     o Roughly 300+ parents apply each year for 100 spots
   • What makes our program a “quality” Dual Language program?
     o We have received an A on our school report card for 4 years straight o Our teachers routinely engage in action research to increase achievement levels across all subject areas…in two languages
     o There are multiple professional development opportunities for teachers to improve their professional arsenal of resources.
Our schedule provides teachers with multiple periods to collaborate on curriculum, looking at student data, and developing student portfolios.

- We hold parent workshops on new units of study, to support them in school projects, and they help run cultural celebrations (i.e., Puerto Rican Independence, 5 de Mayo…)
- We have side by side, self-contained and CTT classrooms.
- We use the same citywide assessments for our students’ English language proficiency (NYSESLAT and ECLASS and LAB-R).

- Moving forward, we need to incorporate more technology, specifically on a parent-outreach level.
